

EYES SO BLUE

By Alan Kim Cochran

Lazily:      Open                  Strum                  Plectrum

Em                                  D                                  C
She came from Jackson Hollow, when her schooling all had ended
Em                                  D                                  C
We became good friends, or at least we both pretended
Em                                  D                                  Am
She reminded me of me, or of what I'd been before
Em                                  D                                  C
And, the time she flustered red, when I told her she meant more... to me

Em                                  D                                  C
What place have you lived, that a man could make you tremble?
Em                                  D                                  C
I'd found no one like you, and I never could dissemble
Em                                  D                                  Am
Flower in the desert, my bright and shining girl
Em                                  D                                  C
Gem of deepest ocean, my soft, exquisite pearl

Bm                                  C                                  Bm                                  C
I'd never seen eyes so blue, in a face of flax and linen
Bm                                  C                                  D
Or a smile so inviting too, what answer could be given?

Em                                  D                                  C
Confident and free, all the world at your feet
Em                                  D                                  C
You were bold and you were fine, so faithful and discrete
Em                                  D                                  Am
You reminded me of me, or of what I'd been before
Em                                  D                                  C
And, the time you flustered red, when I told you you meant more... to me

Em                                  D                                  C
You loved another man, only he would never have you
Em                                  D                                  C
You wasted all our time, wanting only him to cling to
Em                                  D                                  Am
You reminded me of me, or of what I'd been before
Em                                  D                                  C
And, the time you flustered red, when I told you you meant more... to me

Bm C Bm C
I'd never seen eyes so blue, in a face of flax and linen
Bm C D
Or a smile so inviting too, what answer could be given?

-INSTRUMENTAL OF VERSES-

Em D C
I found another girl, doing only what I must
Em D C
And you found, without love, life was only dust
Em D Am
You reminded me of me, or of what I'd been before
Em D C
And, the time you flustered red, when I told you you meant more... to me

Em D C
She came from Jackson Hollow, when her schooling all had ended
Em D C
We became good friends, or at least we both pretended
Em D Am
She reminded me of me, or of what I'd been before
Em D C
And, the time she flustered red, when I told her she meant more... to me

Bm C Bm C
I'd never seen eyes so blue, in a face of flax and linen
Bm C D
Or a smile so inviting too, what answer could be given?
Bm C Bm C
I'd never seen eyes so blue, in a face of flax and linen
Bm C D
Or a smile so inviting too, what answer could be given?